Subject: Review of City Operations, Community Development Department

The Issue

City Council has requested a review of all city operations. Each month a different city department will review its operations with the City Council. The Community Development Department will be describing its operations at this Council meeting.

Conclusions and Recommendations

None. This is a discussion item.

Major Laws & Statutes

Following are the major laws and statutes governing the operations of the Community Development Department (CDD):

Planning

- California Planning and Zoning Law
- California Subdivision Map Act
- California Environmental Quality Act
- Brown Act
- Auburn Municipal Code

Building

- California Code of Regulations (Building, Fire, Plumbing, Electrical, Mechanical, Residential)
- Auburn Municipal Code

Code Enforcement

- International Property Maintenance Code
- Uniform Code for Abatement of Dangerous Buildings
- Auburn Municipal Code

Background

The Community Development Department for the City of Auburn has evolved through the years. Primarily, the CDD is involved with what occurs on private property. Depending on the issue,

CDD is also involved on public property. From the vacant lot through the life of the building to demolition and reconstruction, the different functions/divisions of the CDD (Exhibit A, organization chart) regulates/manages what occurs on a lot. With that in mind one can better understand why the CDD encompasses the range of functions/divisions described in Exhibits B – G (planning, building, code enforcement, public service counter & support, affordable housing, and special projects).

Over the last twenty years the CDD has changed to provide for better accountability within one department, expand the range of public services, and respond to the fiscal constraints placed upon the city. In 1990 Building was its own department, there was no code enforcement officer, the city had not been involved with an affordable housing project, there was no business loan program, there were multiple public counters staffed by different departments, and city hall had no answer machines or centralized phone system.

One item worth discussing in more detail is the Public Service Counter & Support division (Exhibit E), which was created due to the recession in the early 1990s. Fiscal constraints at that time moved the city to consolidate clerical staff and create one public counter to handle issues pertaining to public works, planning and building. This staff also provided clerical support to other city departments as needed. Due to the current fiscal constraints just about everyone in city hall has helped to staff this function. At this time the primary back-up for this function are the building inspectors with planners providing additional support.

The Public Service Counter is an example of not only how intertwined CDD staff has become, but also how CDD staff and other city departments are working together to try to provide a consistent level of service to the public.

Analysis

CDD operations can be broken down into six functions. See Exhibits B – G for a detailed description of each.

1. Planning (Exhibit B)
2. Building (Exhibit C)
3. Code Enforcement (Exhibit D)
4. Public Service Counter & Support (Exhibit E)
5. Affordable Housing (Exhibit F)
6. Special Projects (Exhibit G)

Due to staff reductions within CDD and other departments, the type of work being done no longer can stay within traditional boundaries. Especially within building, code enforcement and special projects staff is being utilized to assist each other and other departments.

Statistics have been provided for building (Exhibit H), code enforcement (Exhibit I) and planning (Exhibit J). Building activity has declined since 2007, but has seen a minor increase in 2010. Code enforcement has seen an increase in activity since 2007. Planning entitlements has declined since 2007.

To varying degrees for each of these functions, the statistics provide only a partial picture. For example, much of what is described as “assistance to other departments” (Exhibits C, D, E and G) has no category for tracking. Also, there is a considerable amount of time spent by CDD that is customer service related that has no application or fee. Finally, the time spent on a project varies greatly and it is difficult to compare. Following are some examples:

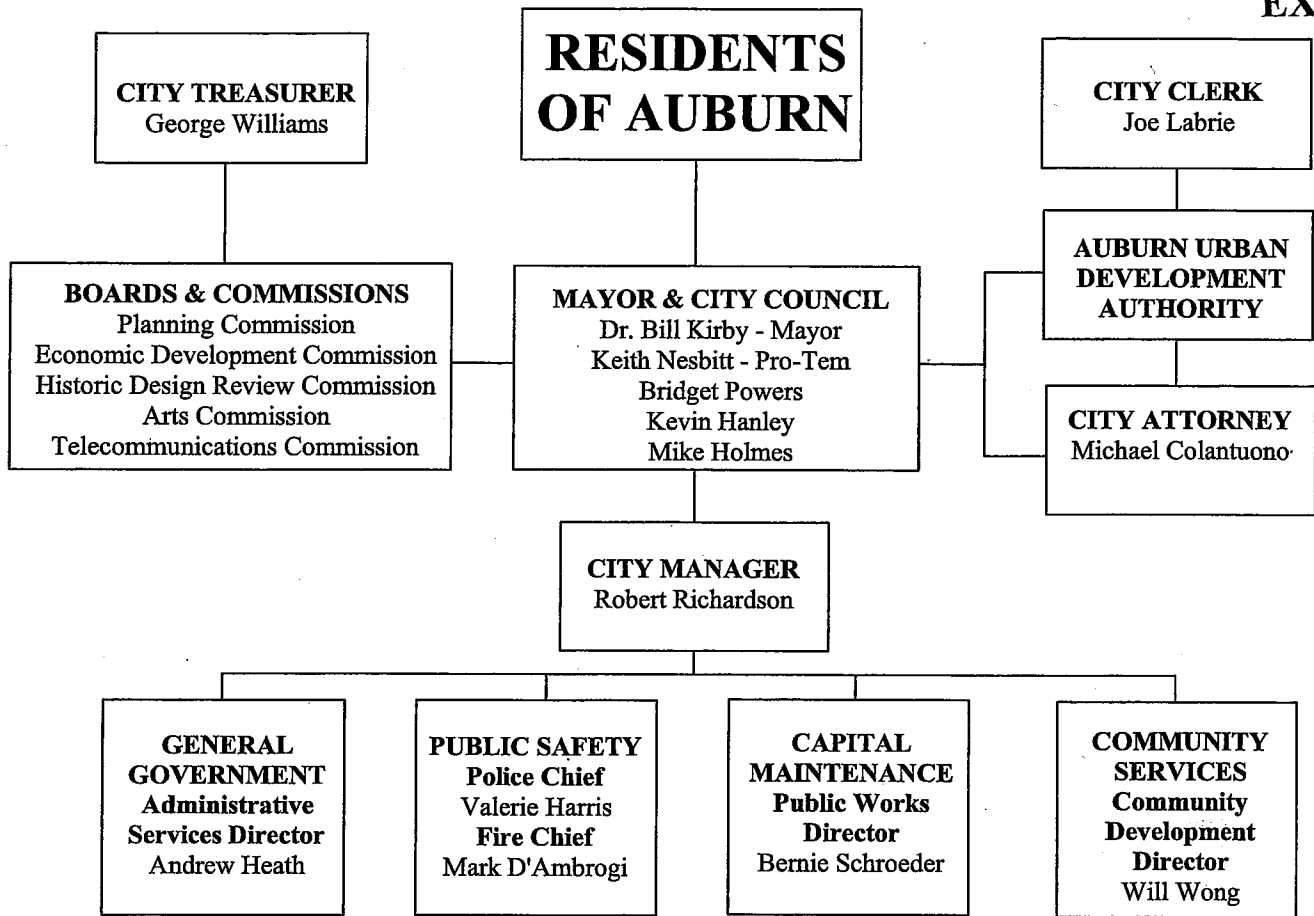

1. Inquiries on what can be built, what type of business, research on a property, potential buyers, etc. Assistance can range from minutes to hours. Sometime site visits or meetings will be needed, which can include other departments (no statistics).
2. Working with the owner of the Gottschalks building since its closure to find a new tenant (only statistic is a building permit for the tenant improvements).
3. Baltimore Ravine Specific Plan started in 2007 and continues today. In 2009 51 hours per month of CDD staff time was needed and in 2010 68 hours per month. This does not include staff time required from other departments (noted as a project in 2007).
4. Planning projects in Auburn are all in-fill and as you know can be very controversial and time consuming. Examples of these are Auburn Bluffs subdivision/Auburn Folsom Road, Indian Hill office/Indian Hill Road, Elm Plaza/373 Elm Avenue, Tuscan Palms townhome/Electric Street, and cell tower variance on Borland Avenue (noted once when application submitted).
5. Dog ordinance amendment versus dog vaccination reporting ordinance amendment. Update of the sign ordinance versus changing public noticing requirements for projects (examples of similar projects with considerable staff time difference).
6. Code enforcement could be a courtesy letter to the demolition of a building (446 Olive Orchard).
7. Elm Plaza/373 Elm Avenue, Auburn Towers/1240 High Street, Summer Ridge Subdivision/Oakridge Way. These are projects that went through the route of trying to be sold by the owner, foreclosed on by the bank, inquiries by multiple bank representatives, and inquiries by potential buyers. These all took considerable amount of time by CDD and other city departments to resolve. The only statistic occurred at the end when a building permit was obtained to complete the projects.
8. Airport & Airport Industrial Park. Since the city is the property owner there are tasks that do not require an application and therefore not tracked. Examples of these would be lease issues, changing lots lines (Coherent buildings and Nella Oil), and reviewing city and county projects for compliance with Airport Land Use Compatibility Plan.
9. First time homebuyer and housing rehabilitation programs. Did not track the number of hours to complete the grant application. For the last two months staff time totaled 50 hours. It is anticipated that approximately 55 hours of staff time per month for two years will be needed to complete this project (special project with no statistic).

Alternatives Available to Council; Implications of Alternatives

2. No further discussion.

Fiscal Impact
